PROTOTYPING CHAMPIONS

As a “Prototyping Champion” your role is to be an advocate for the project and its activities and methods.

You will be kept informed about the project by email updates, talking with the core team and you will be invited to some of the core-team working groups.

You would be expected to spread the word about the project and to champion the use of prototyping in Barnet (and beyond!). You will discuss the work with your networks or teams and create lively discussions.

This role will take as much or as little time as you want to invest, from chatting casually about the project to guest-speaking at meetings or events.

CRITICAL FRIENDS

As a “Critical Friend” your role is to be objective, to bring a fresh perspective, and to ask questions.

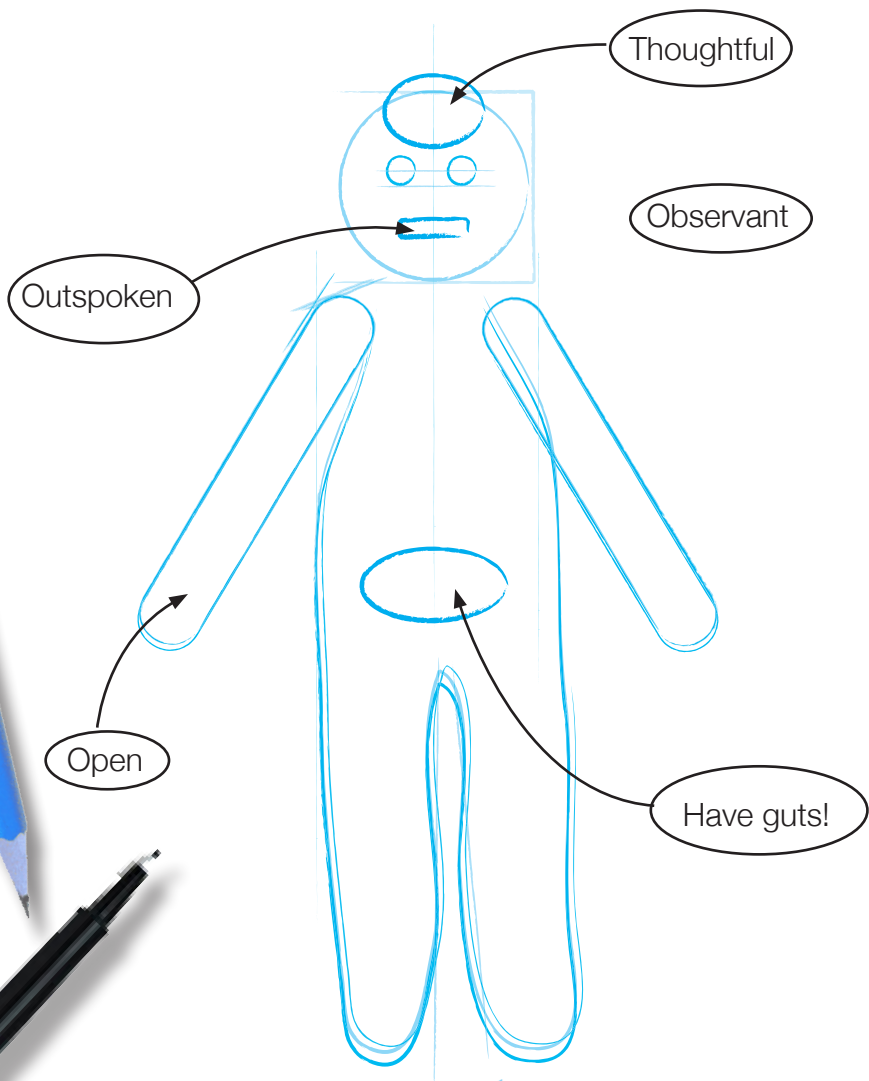

You are a friendly interrogator.

You will support the project by offering your individual expertise and provide constructive criticism and feedback to the Core Team.

You will be invited to attend the some of the bi-weekly working groups and be given space to challenge the group and offer your insight, comments and expert knowledge.

You will be diplomatic, thoughtful and offer reflection on the project with an external perspective.

CORE TEAM

As a “Core Team” member you will be working on the ground, closely involved in developing this new approach, building and prototyping a new life coaches service to support families in Barnet.

You are the key to making this project happen.

With thinkpublic as your co-pilots, you will be leading the prototyping activities and engaging directly with citizens to test and refine solutions.

You will also work with thinkpublic to develop a framework for using prototyping in the design of future Council service ideas.

You will need to attend four workshops over a period of three months as well as core-team working groups.

You will be;

- open to trying out new things and working in new ways
- interested in turning concepts into real things
- passionate about trying things out, testing them, and learning
- interested in engaging meaningfully with citizens in the creation of new ideas.
